Howdy Ags!

There is nothing like the first day of spring football. For the coaches who have been traveling around the country recruiting, it's their first opportunity to hit the field and officially start working on next season. For the team, it has only been a short time since they were standing in the middle of the Georgia Dome as the confetti dropped in celebration of a victory over the Duke Blue Devils. After a short break, the Aggies focused on conditioning and getting stronger for next year's campaign. It was their time to hit the field and start trying to earn playing time and show the coaches what they can do. Fans are anxious to see what this team will be like, post Johnny Manziel, and to see who will step up and fill the shoes of Aggie players that have moved on.

Whoever decided to start spring football on February 28th—the earliest of all SEC teams—should get an “A” in marketing. As I woke up that morning and watched Sports Center, it looked like ESPN had become the Aggie Network. For basically half of the show, they were talking about Texas A&M or Johnny Manziel. It was like having our very own recruiting show. Very smart!

As I watched the guys run out onto the practice field for the first time, I got really excited to see what these guys will do this year. Inside this issue you will find the consensus top five nationally ranked recruiting class that Coach Sumlin and his staff have assembled for 2014. As I watched mid-term enrollees like Kyle Allen and Speedy Noil, I couldn't help but be impressed with the direction that our program is going. The speed and athleticism of our current roster is pretty special, and the competition was fierce this spring. Our depth was better and our coaches will have more options moving forward. The countdown to the 2014 season has begun, and it should be a lot of fun watching this group this fall!

Gig'em Ags!

Cole Lankford trots toward first base after hitting a game winning single with the bases loaded to knock off the #5 LSU Tigers. With the game tied 2-2 in the ninth, the Aggies loaded the bases. The Tigers countered by bringing in a fifth infielder, setting up Lankford's late-game heroics. Cole's walk-off single set off a wild celebration on the field and in the stands. The Ags went on to take the series two games to one.

men's golf: The men competed in cold and rainy conditions on the final day but were able to battle from behind to tie the LSU club for a share of the 2014 Aggie Invitational. Junior Greg Yates carded an impressive 69 to lead the team on Sunday, shooting a bogey-free 32 on the final nine holes of the tournament.

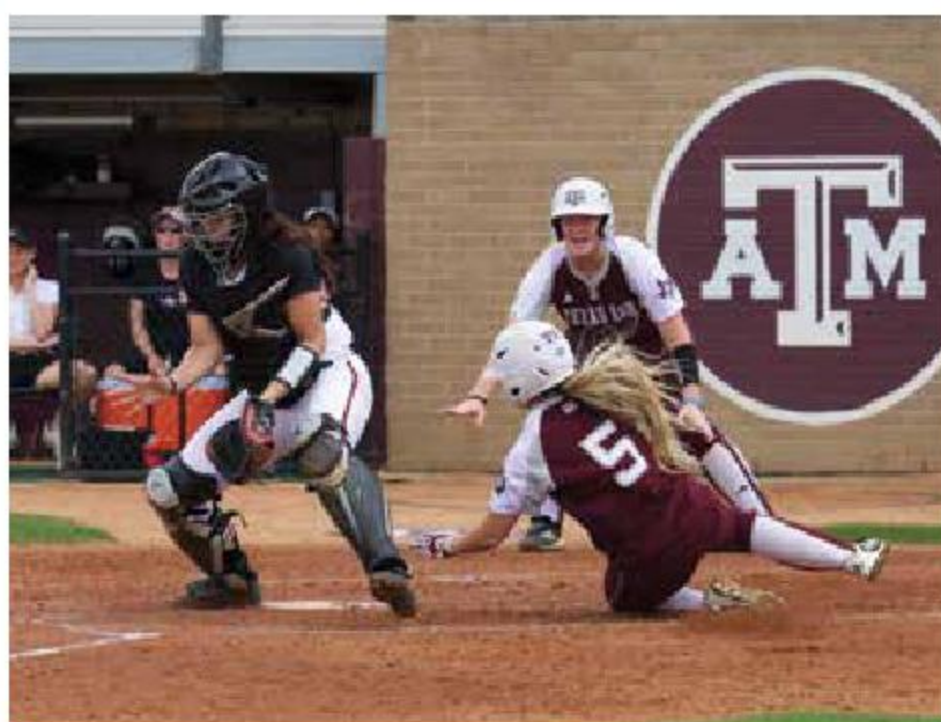

men's basketball: The Aggies finished their 13-14 season by coming up just short in the second round of the College Basketball Invitational. The tournament provided post-season experience for the players that will be returning next season. The program bids farewell to seniors Fabyon Harris, Blake McDonald and Payton Carrell. Since wrapping up the season, the Aggies have received commitments from Peyton Allen, a 6'5" guard from Chatham, Illinois, and 5'11" point guard Avery Johnson, Jr. from Plano, Texas.

baseball: The men have battled through a gauntlet of teams in the '14 season, facing the nation's best every weekend while also competing against top ranked non-conference foes. A trip to Nashville to face the number seven Commodores of Vanderbilt might have been the launching pad this team needed as Coach Childress changed up the pitching rotation and the Ags took two of three from one of the best teams in the conference and the nation on the road. Cole Lankford continues to lead the team at the plate, while Grayson Long and Tyler Stubblefield lead on the mound. The team hopes to finish the season on a roll and earn a trip to Omaha.

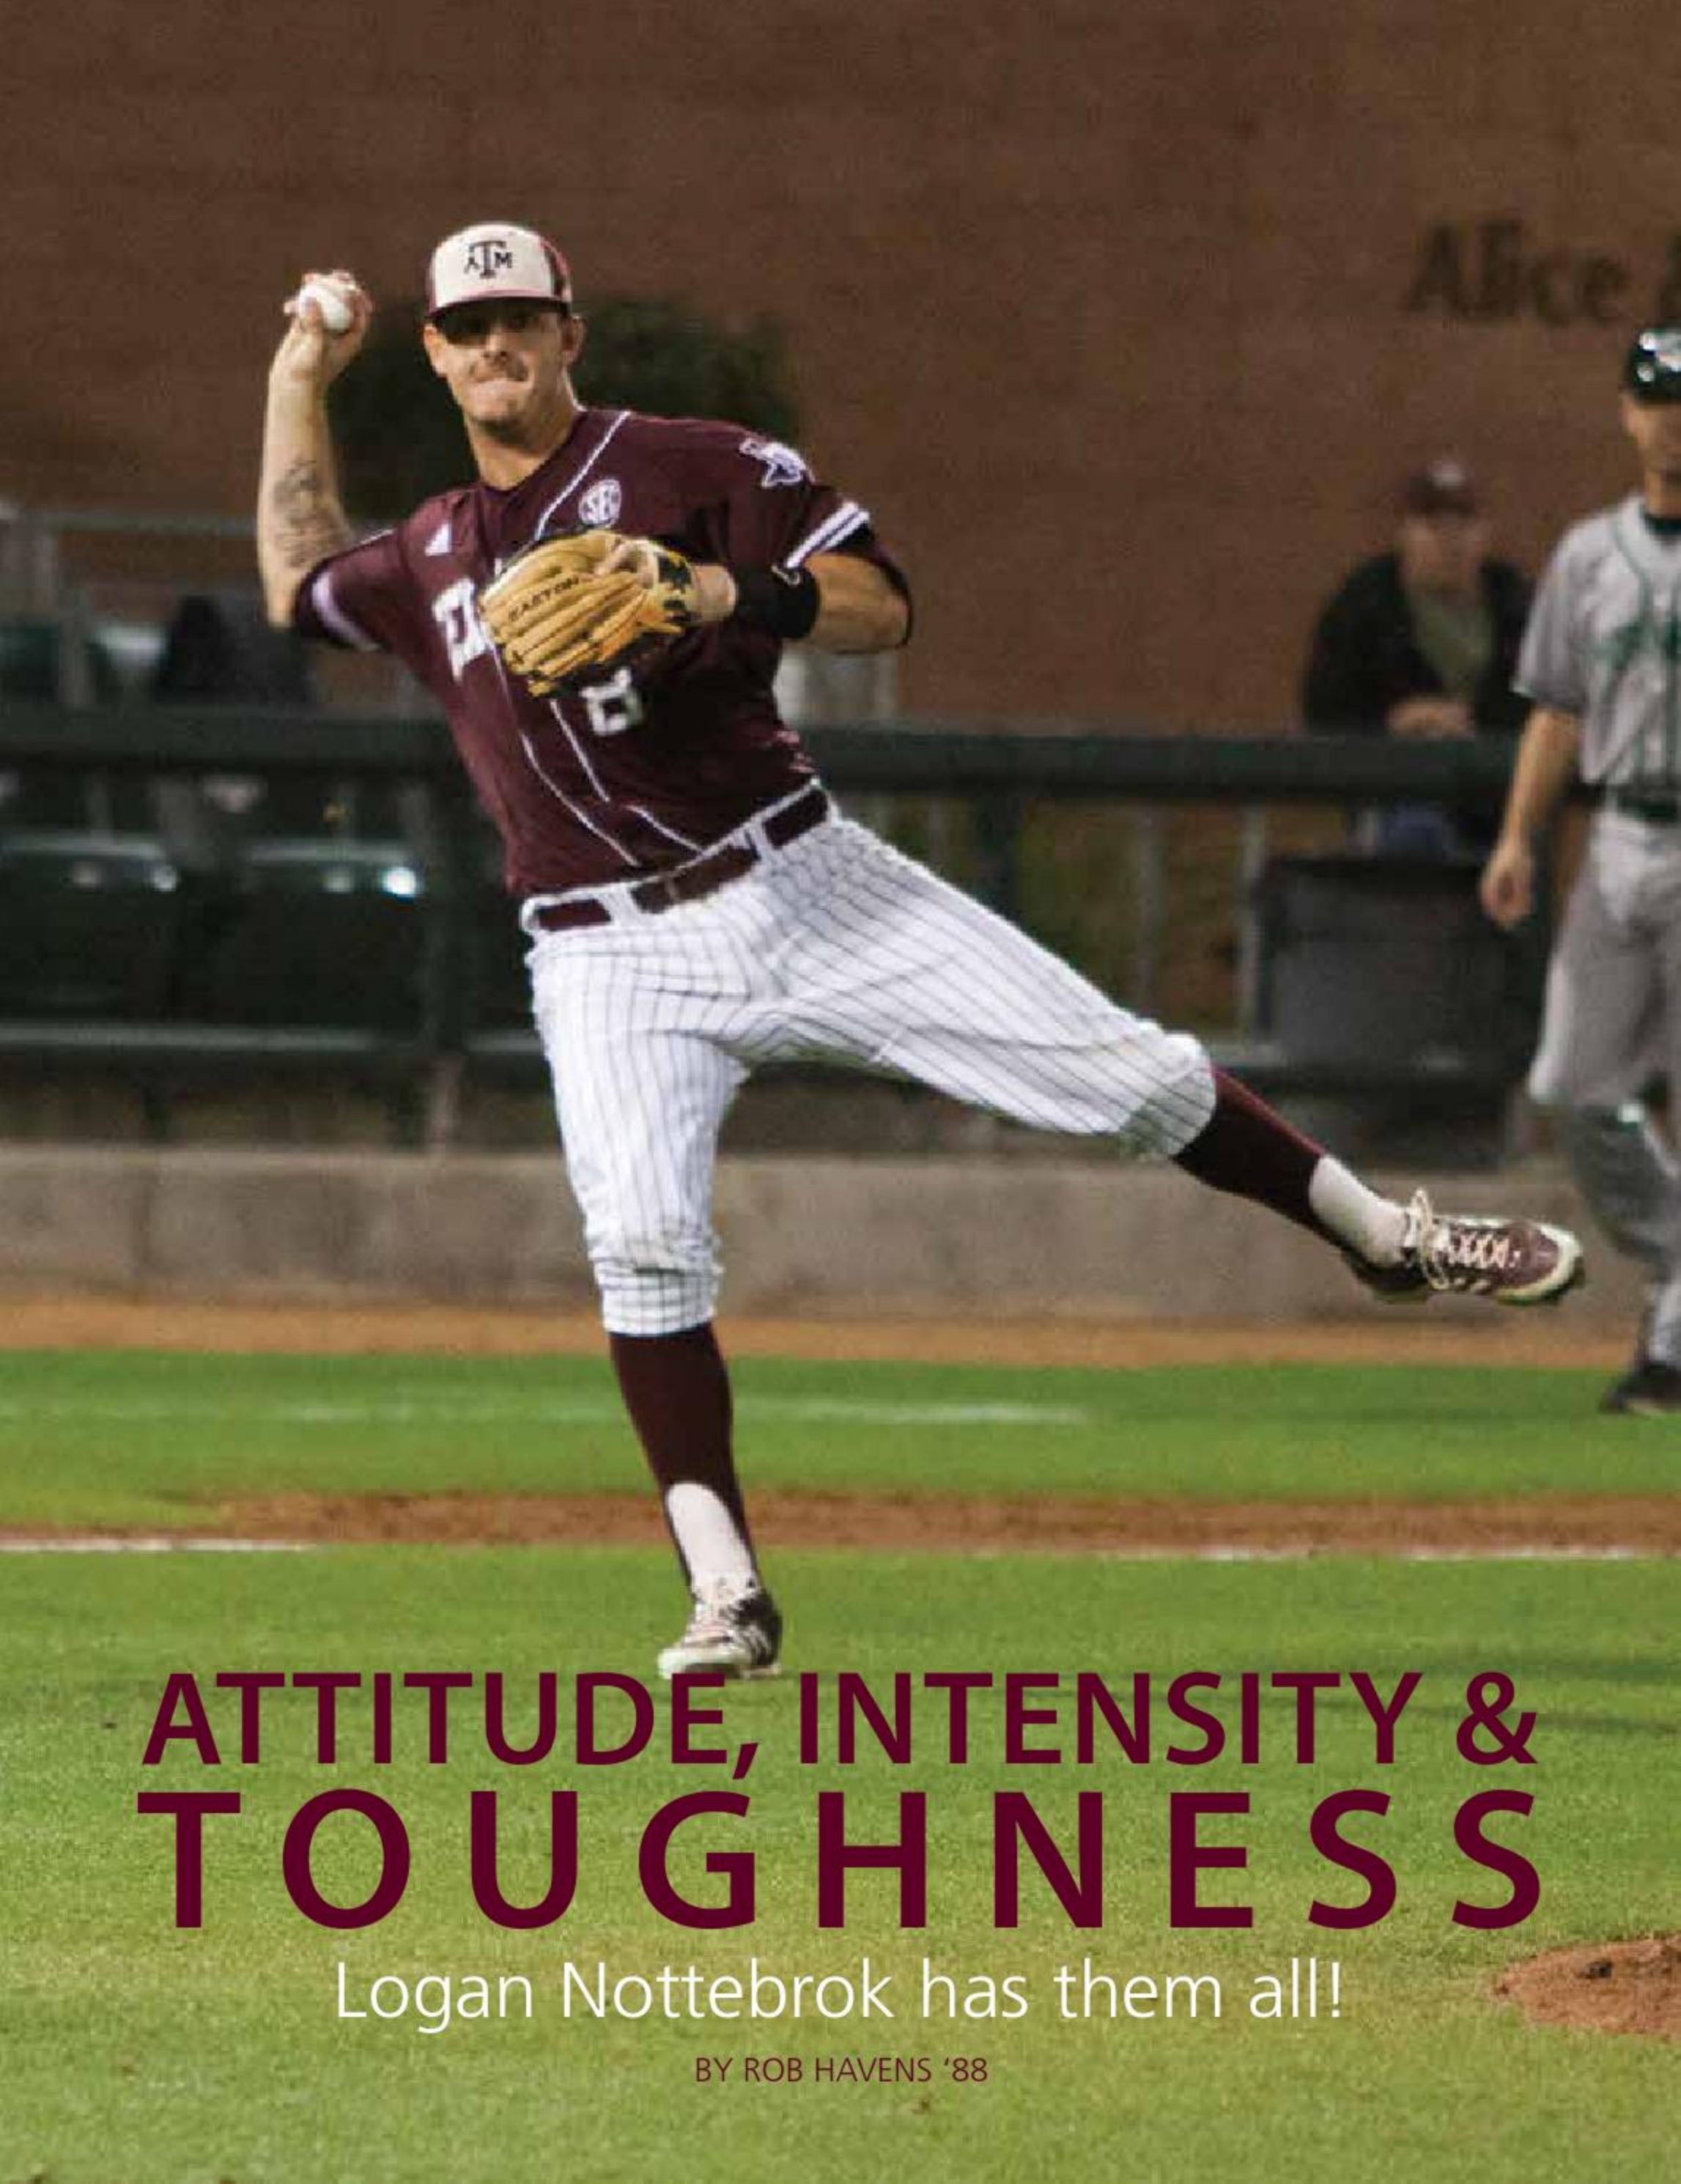

softball: The women are fighting every day through their tough SEC schedule. On Friday, April 11th, the Ags earned coach Evans her 700th win of her Aggie career as they shut down the high powered offense of the number four Tennessee Volunteers and won 4-1 at the Aggie Softball Complex. Emily Albus is batting over .400 and leads the team at the plate, while Rachel Fox and Katie Marks have been the mainstays for the Aggies in the circle. The Ags wrap up the regular season on May 3rd and hope to generate momentum for a run through the SEC and NCAA tournaments.

men's tennis: The number eleven men's team wrapped up the regular season with a 21-6 record, including a 10-2 count in SEC play, securing a number two seed in the SEC tournament. In ITA singles rankings for the final week of the regular season, three Aggies are listed: Harrison Adams, #14; Shane Vinsant, #23; and Jeremy Efferding, #57. The men's team defeated number fifteen Florida to win the 2014 SEC Men's Tennis Championship. Trailing in four of the six singles matches, the Aggies battled back and took the event 4-2 to bring home the championship hardware. track and field: This year the Aggies hosted the SEC Indoor Track and Field Championships for the first time. The women were poised to win the team championship after a second place finish in the 4x400 relay but were disqualified after an official claimed an Aggie impeded a Gator during the anchor leg of the race. Consequently, the ladies finished in second place. Kamaria Brown scored a historic double victory in the 200- and 400-meter races. The Aggie men were third on the podium in team competition and set a collegiate record of 3:03.20 in the men's 4x400 relay, which highlighted the final day of the meet. women's basketball: The Aggies had an impressive run through the NCAA tournament before falling to eventual national champion UConn in the regional final. The ladies cruised through the first two rounds, defeating North Dakota 70-55 and James Madison 85-69 to advance to the Sweet 16. Courtney Walker scored twenty-five points to propel the Aggies past DePaul 84-65 and to the Elite 8. Facing the undefeated Huskies, the Aggies fought gallantly, producing the second closest game of the year for UConn in a 69-54 decision. The Aggies finished tenth in the final poll and said goodbye to Karla Gilbert, Kristen Grant and Christina Sanchez-Quintanar. women's tennis: The eighth-ranked Texas A&M women finished the regular season with an impressive (17-5, 10-3 SEC) record. The SEC is loaded this year, but the Aggies have been ranked in the top eleven since the rankings started on January 2nd. The Ags wrapped up the regular season winning four out of five matches. Senior Christina Stancu earned a career high singles ranking of eight in the final week, making her the second highest ranked individual in A&M history. The Aggies hope to continue their post-season success from last year and make a run at the national championship.

ATTITUDE, INTENSITY & TOUGHNESS

Logan Nottebrok has them all!

BY ROB HAVENS '88

Tell me about growing up, when you became interested in A&M, and the two schools you went to before A&M.

Well, to be honest with you, growing up it was mainly football and baseball for me. When it comes to A&M, one of my older sisters went here, but it was never really in the picture for me. I went to high school in San Antonio and played four years of football and four years of baseball. A&M never recruited me out of high school, never talked to them. After that I went to A&M Corpus Christi. Went there for two years. First year, I played baseball and then I got kicked off the team for grades. I had grade issues. Sat out a whole year of baseball. Never picked up a bat, didn't pick up a ball. Then, randomly, one day working, I got a call from a junior college coach asking me if I could come try out for his team. Said yeah, sure, why not? Went and tried out, offered me a full ride right on the spot. Then had one of the best years that I've ever had. That was last year, after not playing a whole year. Then, luckily, at the end of the year, these guys recruited me to come here to come play baseball again, so it's been a journey for me.

Did the coach just know you from high school?

Couldn't tell you. I had no idea. I was playing against Cisco, actually against Patrick McLendon. I had a really good series against them and I was going into the bathroom and Coach Sealy was walking out of the bathroom, and he had talked to me and gave me his number and said, "We'll be in touch." Then later on in the year, we kind of chit-chatted a little bit, but nothing really like 'oh they're interested in me.' The very end of the year when I was trying to figure out where I was going to go, it was between here and Texas State. At one point, it was more Texas State than here. Then, all of a sudden, they called me one day and said, "Hey, we want to get you here on a recruiting trip." Pretty much blew—well, I don't want to say blew Texas State off—but at A&M Corpus you always hear about the Texas' and the Texas A&M's and the community here, how great it is, and you don't really experience it until you get here. Then, when I got here on my recruiting trip, you walk down the wall and you see all the cool pictures of all the guys. Some of those guys I know personally. Cliff Pennington, he was a family friend of mine in Corpus Christi. So it just felt like home for me here. It was a good place to pick.

As far as baseball, are there any Aggie baseball traditions that you really like?

To be honest with you, I like it all. They have a saying: 'attitude, approach, intensity, and toughness' here. I haven't had that in any other college. They really abide by that. If you don't do it, they're going to let you know real quick. They just want you to give a 110 percent all the time. If you make errors, it's going to happen. They want you diving for balls, they want you running through the bag as hard as you can, even if you're out. On pop-ups, they want you at third base before that thing lands in the glove. I think that's something special. I don't think a lot of coaches take pride in that. Their expectations of you when you come in here from day one was just like, this is real, we have a plan. If you aren't on train with this plan, there's the door, get out. That's something that I take a lot of pride in. That's awesome to feel whenever you're a player.

If you had a choice of making a great defensive play or making a big hit, which do you prefer?

My gut feeling wants to say the big hit, like walk-off homeruns; those are awesome. But me, I take a lot of pride in my defense. I'm a bigger guy, so I don't move like Logan Taylor or Blake Allemand or Patrick McLendon, so I need all the help I can get. Making two diving plays in the opening week, that was more important to me than the walk-off homeruns or the big hits. Even though on one of them I didn't get the guy out. Just walking in the dugout, all the guys are like, "Geez, how did you catch that?" That's a better feeling than the walk-off home runs.

So far, what's your favorite tradition at A&M?

I'm going to have to go with the war hymn. When you're on the field in the 9th inning and it comes on, and you see the war hymn, and the whole stands are going opposite ways, you don't realize how cool it is. It was an eye opener. Definitely put that deep down in my heart 'cause that's something we should take pride in. Not a lot of people do that stuff.

What's your favorite thing about being an Aggie?

I would just say the Aggie family, the Aggie network in general. I go home to San Antonio and I'll wear an Aggie baseball shirt, and three little kids will run up to you in the restaurant and ask you for your autograph, and you've never seen them in your life. Just 'cause they see your shirt, and they ask you if you play, and I'm like, 'yeah,' they will ask, "Can I have your autograph?" Everyone just wants to be a part of it. To me, there's something different about here than anywhere else. I feel like everybody here has so much more respect for you. People really treat you with respect here. At least that's what I've gotten out of it. I haven't had one rude comment to me. I'd just say that's the Aggie network, people know you, the family.

Have you heard the fans up in the stands now when you get up to bat?

Yeah, I think they say, 'let's get naughty.' They get pretty loud. Especially in that stadium, it feels like they're just right on top of you. Every little word, you can pretty much hear. It's pretty unique—haven't had that one.

CALI LANPHEAR

Perfect school for her was just a short drive from home.

BY ROB HAVENS '88

Tell me about being recruited to come to A&M. Did you grow up in Montgomery?

I grew up in Montgomery. Neither of my parents went to college, and my mom's a flight attendant, so I was like, 'okay, I'm probably going to go out of state here.' My mom can fly and see me wherever I go! But no, I was lucky enough to have a lot of opportunities to go see different schools, and I just fell in love with Aggieland. I love the culture here, the family atmosphere, and it's only an hour away from home, so that's nice. Coach Evans is great. She's a big part of why I'm here.

You made it to State in high school?

We went one year. Gosh, we had a great team my senior year, a lot of great seniors going to different schools. We lost by one run, and it was actually the day of my high school graduation. After we lost, we had to do a graduation ceremony on the field with tears and eye-black and sweat, and it was on the t.u. field, so it was okay. It was mixed emotions.

In high school, did you catch?

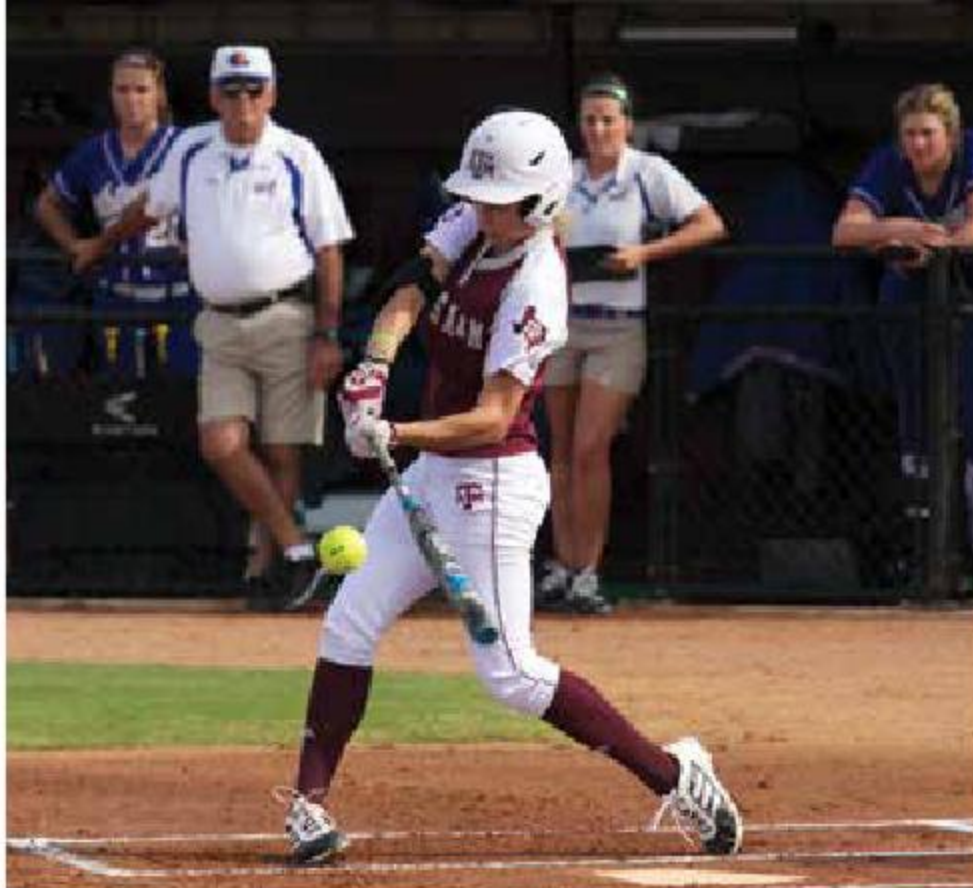

I was a catcher, yeah! I love catching. Coach recruited me from my select team, and my freshman year, whenever I tried out and made my select team, my coach said, "You will never bat right-handed for me and you will never catch for me." So I was like, 'okay, let's think about this for a second.' But this coach had put all of his girls to college and knew what he was doing, so we were like, 'okay, we trust you.' I still caught in high school, though; I loved it and kind of got the outfield thing in select ball, and that's where coach recruited me.

Are you mostly the designated player then?

Pretty much. Last year there wasn't really a spot for me in the field. We are an upperclassmen-based team. Coach just gave me some opportunities our first year at UCLA, and I kind of capitalized on them. She really didn't have a choice, I guess, but to put me in the lineup and find a spot!

Reading your other stats, it says you led the team in batting average, runs, RBI's, homeruns, extra base hits, on base, and slugging percentage. Is that right?

I guess that's right! Numbers don't lie!

And then you were just second in hits.
Second in hits, yeah!

That's awesome!

Yeah, I had high expectations for myself my freshman year. All of us come from great high school backgrounds where, obviously, we are at the top of our game at our high schools and select teams. But I did have high expectations for myself here and didn't want to let myself, my family, and all my people down. It's the same game. Same game I've been playing for a while now.

Tell me about this year so far.

I'm kind of off to a slow start this year. Not bad, just kind of taking a while to get back in it. Eight seniors, we are loaded. I have high hopes. You know, last year we were 19-0 to start off with. So, I think we kind of peaked early last year and kind of fell a little when we got into conference. Hopefully, we will peak at a little better time this year.

Do you like the chemistry of this year's team?

Oh my goodness, it is great! So great! I've played with a bunch of teams before, and girls will be girls, but no. Everybody gets along and, of course, we all have our days, but we know how to handle each other, and the chemistry is unreal this year.

Tell me your favorite moment so far playing for the Aggies.

That would be at regionals against Baylor last year. We were three runs down; Amber was on, Emily was on, and I came up and hit a homerun to tie it, and then Nic was right behind me with the walk-off! So that was pretty cool.

Is it kind of cool that we are still playing Baylor? In the regional area, once it gets to post-season, there's a good chance that we're going to play them, right?

Yeah! Last year I kept saying all year that we are going to play Baylor or Texas within the regional. I think we are good 'cause we have a lot of competition in the SEC to get us ready for that.

What was your favorite place that you traveled to in the SEC last year?

I liked Tennessee. Downtime was cool, cool area. It was real friendly, kind of reminded me of A&M. Just the culture of the university and the southern feel. Feels cool.

Who do you like to hang out with on the team when you're not playing softball?

Katie Marks and I are really close. We played together before she came here. It was between 8th and 9th grade. We are roommates and just hang out a lot.

Is there a place that you're looking forward to playing this year on the road?

I don't know. My two highlights have been California, which we have already been to. Santa Barbara was nice, on the water. Really cool town. I've been to Southern Cal a lot, but I've never been to Santa Barbara, so that was really neat. Palm Springs was nice! It was dry and my hair stayed! We've had fun trips. They treat us well.

What is your favorite tradition of Texas A&M and your favorite on the softball field?

I think it's the 12th Man. You know, going to the football games, it is just a culture that you cannot find anywhere else. We have the Sugar Daddies here, which is our version of the yell leaders. They keep us in the game, and we keep them in the game. So it's a good feeling with the 12th Man behind your back.

Can you hear comments from in the stands?

From the Sugar Daddies? Definitely! We laugh with them! We feel bad for the teams that we are playing. But they are great!

Would you consider the softball atmosphere here different from the other SEC teams?

Without a doubt! Yeah. I'd put our field against anybody; our 12th Man, oh yeah. People hate to come here.

BY ROB HAVENS '88

America's favorite pastime has always been baseball. Aggie baseball at Olsen is truly a unique experience, even for the most die-hard of baseball fans. But, did you know there is another Aggie baseball team? The A&M Club baseball team with the Sport Clubs Association has one of the most talented groups of players in the country. In fact, they are the nationally ranked number one pre-season team this season.

The club started in '99 and has attracted players that have played baseball their entire lives and want to keep playing. According to club president Austin Bear, it's a great way to meet new people and develop lifelong friends. Bear was a transfer student and had played since he was a kid; he decided to join the team to compete and meet new people.

The team consists of 27 players and is filled with talent. The ace on the pitching staff is David Williams, while Vaughn Miller leads the team at the plate. The club practices three times per week and is striving for a return trip to the World Series in May, after having made it to the tournament last year.

Bear tells AI that the team's main conference rival is UT, but their main rival overall is Texas Tech. In the fall, the team made it to the semi-final game of the Wood Wars Tournament in McKinney, Texas. The team is working hard to meet their goals this season. Austin says the most important trait that makes a good baseball player is attitude. "There are many great skill players, but if they do not have the right attitude, they are hard to coach and do not get along with other team members."

The camaraderie the players develop during practice and on road trips has created memories that Bear will remember forever. He said the trip to Florida last year was so much fun and that the stories and funny things that happened are memories he will keep with him for the rest of his life. Bear describes how the team will take a group of new players that just made the team, and a week later they are already talking about rooming together. This proves once again that baseball is still America's favorite pastime, bringing friends and families together since the game first started.

The team has a few donors and also receives financial assistance from the Department of Recreational Sports.

Judo

BY ROB HAVENS '88

Judo was created in Japan as a modern martial art, combat and Olympic sport in 1882. In competition, the competitive elements consist of throwing or taking down your opponent, immobilizing or subduing them with a pin, or causing them to submit using a joint lock or choke.

We asked club president Ryan Wenzel about the Judo Club here at A&M. Wenzel, who started with the club the summer prior to his freshman year, says, "The club is an amazing collection of individuals. We have also become friends and socialize on and off campus. When an individual joins this club, they also become a member of a tightly knit group of friends."

The team consists of over twenty-five members. Bob Perez and Dan Gomez serve as coaches and are always there to provide guidance. Cory Klemashevich is an expert in ground techniques, while Arash Pourabib is an expert in standing techniques. Nathan Westbrook brings ten years of experience to the team and is also the former president of the club. Alexandra Escobedo and Carlos Perez are club officers that are instrumental in making events possible.

The team practices three days per week. Ryan told AI that most new members are also new to the sport, although there are some who may have participated in another martial art when they were younger. Wenzel says, "Judo provides an exotic experience. In order to become a great judo member, an individual must be patient and have a desire to learn. Judo requires individuals to use precise movements in order to execute a throw. In order to perform these moves correctly, an individual must be willing to spend a great deal of time learning proper techniques."

The club has hosted the Texas Collegiate Championship for the past fourteen years, and this year Texas A&M hosted the largest National Collegiate Judo Championship since 1998. The club also competes in tournaments in other locations. We asked Wenzel about his favorite experience traveling with the team, to which he replied, "When traveling to tournaments with team members, there is great camaraderie and the knowledge that whatever challenges are ahead, you will not be facing them alone."

The Judo Club has a scholarship endowment that provides financial aid to members of the team. Donations from former members and others provide funding for this scholarship endowment. To learn more about sport club endowments, visit recsports.tamu.edu/development/giving_back.stm.
